Are you selling safes with the right certification

Insurance cover

This rating indicates up to which value cash and valuables will be covered by the insurance company when they are stored inside a safe. Depending on the security measures taken insurance companies may diverge from the insurance cover value.

Advice: Always contact your insurance company whether they agree with the recommended insurance cover for your safe. Several environmental circumstances may lower the value, but can also increase it!

Since March 2005 the new European norm EN 14 450 is valid. This norm has especially been developed to rate frequently bought safes - particularly for daily use and storage of valuables. The anchoring of the safe either to the floor or to the wall is required.

In order to classify the quality of a safe the producer attaches a label at the inner side of the door. Like this you can see that the safe has been produced under supervised circumstances and has been tested according to the indicated resistance grade.

The EN standards that the BURG-WÄCHTER Safes are graded to, are typically either equivalent to the AS/NZS standards or are recognised by insurance companies in Australia & New Zealand to the same published guidelines

BURG-WÄCHTER safes correspond to the highest technical standard and are internationally acknowledged.

The BURG-WÄCHTER safe series KARAT, DIPLOMAT, OFFICE and ROYAL fulfil the requirements of the European norms EN-1143-1 and/or EN 1047-1.

This is confirmed by the certificates issued through the ECB-S, the European Certification Board • Security Systems (certification office according to EN 45011).

The ECB-S certification contains a regular and unannounced control of several production facilities: This guarantees a high and constant quality level.

REMOTE PROGRAMMING TROUBLESHOOTING

Having problems manually programming remotes from procedures obtained from the "SRS" ?

Our team have compiled issues learnt in the field to develop a trouble shooting guide to help with some common problems that can cause frustration with programming remotes to problem vehicles.

Preliminary checks

1. When the key is inserted into the ignition with the door open does the ignition chime to alert the driver the key was left in the ignition? If not the vehicle may have a blown fuse, the device on the ignition barrel has been removed or is faulty.
2. When the driver's door is open the vehicle should provide indication of a door being left open, this can be in the form of a light on the dash or the lamp turning on inside the cabin. It is good practice to check that this light is OFF when all doors are shut and the vehicle indicates when a door is opened.

3. If the light does not indicate when the driver's door is opened but indicates when others are opened, the door switch may be faulty, have a bad earth (try removing the bolt and re-tighten) or can also be disconnected.
4. If the light does not indicate at all when any door is opened a fuse has blown.
5. If the light is on at all times, one or more of the door switches are faulty,

Disconnect the wire on each door until the light goes out. If the problem door is not required in the programming procedure leave it disconnected so programming can be completed.

6. Look for obvious required working parts on the programming procedure and isolate them to see if they work correctly. Example on the Subaru programming procedure the procedure requires you Press and hold the door lock switch located under the power window main switch to UNLOCK. Before connecting the registration connectors check that the unlock switch unlocks the vehicle. If the switch does not work, programming will not be successful in the procedure.
